No. 16 at Port Royal Golf Course

Bermuda Golf:

When a country has more golf courses than fast food outlets there is something very, very extraordinary about it. The pedigree of the courses is high; many of them have been designed by famous course architects such as Robert Trent Jones. Bermuda golf courses have distinct characteristics. The unpredictable wind, blowing in from the Atlantic is a factor which many golfers ignore at their peril. Elevated greens, typically guarded by sand traps, provide spectacular views of the ocean. Limited irrigation means that the greens and fairways tend to be firmer and slower than those found in the US. Aquatic hazards are the highlight of many Bermuda golf courses. Challenging championship golf at its' very best!
